CANDIDE ET CONSTANTER

TO

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THOMAS Lord COVENTRY,

Baron of Alsborough, Lord Keeper of the Great Seale of England, Grace and Peace be multiplied.

Right Honourable,

Although neither my person nor condition can any way merit ought at your Lordships hands, yet the benigne aspect which your Honour hath been alwaies observed to afford unto the Labours of such as have desired to doe but the least good service in Gods Church, hath thus farre emboldened mee, in all humility to crave, that these my Endeavours, now much augmented, may againe passe into the publique view under your Lordships Name: which favour being happily obtained, the Worke it selfe may of all sorts expect to bee the rather embraced; and my inſtant requeſts ſhall not ceaſe to bee preſented before the Throne of GODS Grace, that the Spirit of Wiſedome and Underſtanding may reſt upon you, ſtill to direct your Honour in all your grave and great Employments for the Common good, that in the end hee may graciouſly bring you, as a ſhocke of Corne, in a good old Age to his everlaſting Kingdome, by Chriſt Jeſus.

——Your Honours

in all duty and obſervance,

An Advertiſement to the Chriſtian READER, concerning the occaſion of compoſing and publiſhing this CONCORDANCE, together with the manifold uſe thereof.

SUch is the excellency of Scripture-learning, in which conſiſteth the ſoule of true Divinity, that we may ſay of it, as the [a] Philoſopher ſpake concerning the knowledge of the ſoule of man: A ſmall and dimme knowledge of it is to be valued farre above a greater meaſure of clearer inſight in any other ſcience. For the inſpired Oracles of GOD containe in them the infallible rule of faith, the unmoveable ground of hope, the perfect guide of life, the ſacred fewell of devotion, the divine ſubject of contemplation, the everlaſting ſpring of celeſtiall conſolation. The Canonicall Bookes of the Old and New Teſtament are exact Mappes of the heavenly Canaan, drawne by the penſill of the Holy Ghoſt, the authenticall Records of the Church, the Deeds of Almighty God, and Evidences of mans ſalvation. In the peruſall whereof, they who take not exceeding great delight and comfort (it is to be feared) are either wholly earthly, and mind not heaven; or have little aſſurance of any divine Legacy bequeathed to themſelves there. But the children of Promiſe, who will not forgoe their hope of Heaven for all that the Earth can afford, are never ſatisfied in reading over & over day & night, the ſeverall Chapters of the holy Bible, which are as ſo many Codicils, by which their Heavenly Father bequeatheth to them much treaſure of grace here, and ſeverall Crownes of glory in his Kingdome hereafter. In which regard they claime them as their [b] heritage for ever; they eſteeme them [c] above gold, yea much fine gold: and therefore Saint [d] Jerome calleth them a casket of Jewels: Let theſe Jewels, ſaith he, alwayes hang upon thy necke, and at thine eares. They are alſo ſweeter to their taſte than the honey and the honey combe; and therefore devout Saint [e] Auſtin termeth them banquetting diſhes, ſaying, Let thy Scriptures be my delicacies, let me never be deceived in them, nor deceive by them. With knowledge of theſe alone, we may, and by ordering our life accordingly ſhall, goe to heaven: but with all other learning we may, and without this ſhall certainly to Hell. And what will it availe a man to be excellently learned in all other things, and to bee groſly ignorant in that [f] one thing which is neceſſary? What will it ſboot a man to be wiſe to perdition, and to go to hell by booke?

Now if ſuch be the neceſſity and excellency of ſaving knowledge compriſed intirely in holy Scriptures, queſtionleſſe of all pious labours we are moſt to bleſs God for theirs, whereby theſe writings of God may be made more cleere, eaſie, ready, and familiar unto us. For the beſt of all helpes are helpes in the beſt things.

In which kinde all that are not ſtrangers to ſacred ſtudies, accord, that Concordances are of more ſolidity than luſtre; uſe, than ſhew. As [h] the goodly tops of trees are in the eyes of all, but not the roots out of which they grow; and the beautifull fore-fronts of great Palaces, but not the foundations which ſupport them; and the gorgeous garments of cloth of gold and tiſſue richly embroidered with variety of workes and flowers, but not the ſkeines of ſilke, and gold threed, of which yet they are made; So it cannot be denied, but that thoſe exquiſite expoſitions of Scripture, diſcourſes upon Scripture, and deductions from Scripture, which draw all mens eyes unto them with admiration, are not a little indebted for their materials to Concordances, or ſuch like helps of ſtudies. For though by frequent readingof holy Scriptures a man may imprint in his minde the the principall heads of Doctrine, together with the courſe of Hiſtory, and moſt remarkable phraſes through the whole Bible: yet who ever charged his memory with every particular paſſage, every word with the ſeverall repetitions and acceptions therof in Scripture? wherof notwithſtanding our skilfull Bezaleels, who deale with the cutting and ſetting in gold the Diamonds of the divine Word, make ſpeciall uſe: as Saint [b] Chryſoſtom illuſtrateth it by the example of Finers of gold and ſilver, who meddle not only with wedges, ingots, and maſſie peeces of gold, but with the ſmalleſt foyle or ray the metall caſteth.

Were that the only, which is the moſt uſuall employment of a Concordance, to ſerve as a remembrancer to help us out when we ſtick at a quotation, and by retaining one word, as it were laying hold on a clod to recover the whole tract or plat of holy ground, the immenſe labours of the pious Compiler of this work deſerved to be thankfully remembred by us, for thus ſteading our memory. But the uſe of his work extendeth not only to the helping of that faculty. They who exerciſe their invention in dilating upon any ſacred ſubject, or their judgement in diſcerning the naturall and proper ſenſe of Scripture, ſhall find this book ready at hand to furniſh them with that they deſire, either for clearing the text in moſt places, or proofe of any point of Doctrine neceſſary to ſalvation. For the ſeverall words and phraſes in holy Writ are like thoſe [c] pictures of ſilver ſpoken of in the Proverbs, in which apples of gold were incloſed: and conſequently the frame of this Concordance exhibiting to our eye all the pictures of ſilver in their ſeverall places, ſheweth us alſo where wee may with eaſe take out the apples of gold. To explain this a little to ſuch as are either utterly unacquainted with collections of this nature, or caſt an eye of ſcorn upon them (and yet none make more uſe in ſecret of them than they;) if in their reading the Bible they fall upon ſome perplexed ſentence & obſcure place, let them, according to the [d] direction of St. Auſtin, ſeek for other parallel texts or places of Scripture, in which the ſame matter is ſet down more plainly and evidently. For as the Sun is beſt deſcried by his own beams; ſo the Scripture is beſt expounded by Scripture. But if they cannot meet with any parallel ſentence, let them then ſingle out that word or words, the ambiguity whereof cauſes obſcurity in the ſentence. This word or words let them ſearch in their Concordance, and obſerve in each place where they reade it, the ſeverall ſignifications thereof, & among them let them make choiſe of that which upon due examination they find beſt agreeth with the analogie of faith, the ſcope of the place, and circumſtances of the text. Again, if their thoughts fixe upon any ſimple theam (as the Logicians call it) & they deſire in their meditation to proſecute it through all the topicks, & in their way knock at all the doores of arguments, definition, diviſion, parts, cauſes, effects, ſubjects, adjuncts, oppoſites; they ſhall need but to trace the word with the Synonima's in their Concordance, and they cannot miſſe of what may be found in Scripture for their purpoſe. Or if in their method they would handle thema complexum or compoſitum (which in the underſtanding is a compoſition, but in ſpeech a propoſition) let them but reſolve the propoſition into the ſimple termes of which it conſiſteth, and as the Concordance pointeth, turne to thoſe texts in the Bible, in which thoſe ſimplices termini, or equivalent, occurre; ſo they ſhall ſoon gather what the Treaſury of Gods Word yeeldeth, either for the explication, confirmation, or application of that doctrinall principle or concluſion. Thus may they make their Concordance a nurſery garden to ſtore them with choiſe plants and flowers of Paradiſe, I mean divine allegations. In regard of which profit, or rather neceſſity of Concordances, wee reade that Origen, who wrote the firſt Commentary upon holy Scripture, made alſo the firſt Concordance in Greek (though ſomewhat of another nature, & with much more toyle, becauſe out of many tranſlations:) Since his time many have aſſayed a work ſemblable thereunto in Latin. But Hen. Stephanus his Maſter-peece, as it were to make good his name, like that Oration of Demoſthenes de corona, carrieth away the garland from them all.

I fore-ſee

I fore-ſee what ignorance or malevolence may object againſt this worke: that our preſſes are overpreſt with Engliſh books already, what need we then to put them to more torture & make them groan under ſo heavie a bulke as this is in Engliſh? [a] Quis leges haſce in tu iſtud ais? nemo, hercule nemo: vel duo vel nemo. For whom is this work? Schollars can have recourſe to Concordances in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. And the illiterate as little need this work, as they can make uſe of it. To this objection the diligent Compoſer hereof might anſwer as Lucilius in Tulli, that [b] he wrote not his books for the moſt learned, or for the moſt unlearned, but for the middle ſort. They were not for the firſt ſort, & the latter were not for them. The former were too ſharp ſighted, and could ſpy the ſmalleſt errours; the latter were too dull and ſhort ſighted, they could not ſee that which was good in them. The one would not ſtoup ſo low, and the other could not reach ſo high.

But I dare undertake, if they will indifferently and with equity conſider of this work, the Author may deſervedly expect thanks of all ſorts, and they reap benefit by him. To begin at the lower end: There is none that can reade Engliſh, but may help himſelf by this Concordance, to perfect his ſacred collections or divine notes, and readily thereby find any place of Scripture wherof he remembreth any word, having forgot the quotation. For example; If hee remember that hee hath read or heard this phraſe in one of the Prophets, He will caſt all our ſins into the depths of the ſea, and deſireth to find it, that he may meditate upon the place for his further comfort; let him take this book, and ſearch the words Sea, and Depths, and Sinnes, and over paſſing the books of Moſes, Chronicles, Pſalmes, &c. follow the words in the Prophets, where at Micha ch. 7. ver. 19. hee ſhall meet with what he ſeekes for. Likewiſe if any imperfect or broken paſſage out of the Evangeliſts or Apoſtles run in his mind, let him cull out the principall word which he retaineth in his memory (the other having ſlipped him) & let him confine his ſearch in the Concordance to the Goſpels or Epiſtles, and with great facility hee will light upon the whole ſentence deſired by him. By the manifold allegations in the New Teſtament out of the Old, and declarations of them, and alluſions unto them, hee may much confirme his faith in the harmony of Scripture, and conſent of the New Teſtament with the Old. As alſo by the frequent repetition of the ſame doctrines, & often inculcating the ſame duties (ſometimes in the ſame words) in Scripture, he may learne both to bewaile our naturall forgetfulneſſe of thoſe things that moſt concerne us, and take more ſpeciall notice of the moſt neceſſary doctrines of faith, and directions for our life.

Now let me aſcend higher, and crave leave to inform or remember the learned, that they have alſo their ſhare, at leaſt in ſome part, of the crop of this harveſt. For though they be wel acquainted with the Concordances & Tranſlations in the learned languages; yet their mother tongue, in which they heare the Scriptures perpetually read both publikely & privately, cannot but bee more ready to them, and freſh in their memory. Neither will the Concordances in the learned languages give them that ſatisfaction they expect; for, as [c] Reuchlin ſpake of the languages themſelves; The Hebrewes drink out of ſprings, the Greekes out of the rivers, and the Latins of fens: ſo thoſe which make uſe of the Hebrew Concordance of the Old Teſtament, are like thoſe, who drink water out of a moſt pure fountain; thoſe which uſe the Greek, according to the Septuagints tranſlation, or any other, are like thoſe who drink out of rivers, in ſome places muddy, in others brackiſh, yet for the moſt part not unwholſome: But they who uſe the Latin vulgar, are like thoſe who drink out of fens or marſhes, in which the water is every where foule, & in many places unwholſome and infectious. And therefore albeit the [d] Trent Conventicle hath Canonized that tranſlation, and Anathematized all ſuch as upon any pretext whatſoever reject it: yet the learned, even among the Jeſuites, in their Commentaries familiarly leave it, though with reſpective language, and upon faire termes.

And as Pope Leo the tenth before that Synod ſet Arius Montanus on worke to tranſlate

[b] Cic. lib. 2. de orat. Scripta ſua nec ab doctiſſimis nec ab indoctiſſimis legi voluit. Perſium non curo legere, Lælium decimum volo.

translate the whole Bible anew out of the Hebrew, & allowed Eraſmus tranſlation (of the New) often interfering with the vulgar: So Pope Clement the Eighth, ſince that Councell, made bold to correct the edition of Sixtus his predeceſſor (on whom the Councell impoſed that task, to reviſe & ſet forth the vulgar agreeably to their determination) in more than a thouſand places; and yet he himſelfe hath left large gleanings for thoſe that ſhall follow him in the like animadverſions. The truth whereof is ſo evident and undeniable, that the Publiſher of the Concordance out of this vulgar tranſlation, An. 1600. in his Preface, complaineth that hee wrote after a bad copy. The [a] old Interpreter, ſaith he, ſeemeth rather to follow the ſenſe than the words, and oftentimes departs from both, as it clearly appeares by comparing it with the Latin tranſlations of Pagnin, Arius Montanus, and other moſt learned Interpreters, and with the Hebrew and Greek Originals.

a Præf. 1. Concord. 1600. Vetus Interpres ſenſum potius quàm verba videtur reſpexiſſe, imò et à verbis ipſis, & à ſenſu frequenter diſcedit, &c.

Neither let any imagine, that in thus laying open the nakednes of this vulgar Latin, I diſgrace S. Jerom, whoſe name this tranſlation beareth; for ſince his putting forth this verſion (if ever it were his, & not rather an Olla podrida of many corrupt Latin tranſlations, ſome made by Catholikes, & ſome by Heretikes) it hath bin ſo altered almoſt in every Chapter, that it no more deſerveth to be called his, than that famous weather-beaten Bark of Athens, to be called Theſeus his ſhip, which indeed at the firſt was built by him, but in proceſſe of yeeres was ſo often repaired & rigged, that it had never a planke the ſame remaining which it had at the firſt.

Navis Theſei.

The innumerable corruptions in this Latin vulgar, additions to the Hebrew, noted in Stephanus his edition, An. 1532. by Obeliſks; and detractions from the Hebrew, noted by Aſteriſks, were a principall motive to me to encourage the Author of this Concordance to proceed in perfecting this his work; that in ſtead of a Concordance moſt in uſe, collected out of a moſt corrupt tranſlation, wee might by his unwearied paines have a compleat one out of the moſt pure. To the price whereof they whoſe ability will not reach, may at a ſmall rate furniſh themſelves with the abridgement thereof annexed to the Bible.

Since this worke was taken in hand, I confeſſe I underſtood of two other Concordances, the one in Engliſh by Mr. John Marbeck, dedicated to King Edward the ſixt; the other in Latin, fitted to Tremelius and Junius tranſlation, but neither gave me full ſatisfaction. That of Mr. Marbeck is very imperfect, pointing to Chapters, but not to Verſes. That out of Tremelius is appropriated to one edition, & cannot be very uſefull to thoſe who have not that edition, in regard of the exceeding great variety which may be obſerved in the ſeverall editions by Junius, ſtill endeavouring to better his tranſlation. Howſoever, that Concordance is onely for thoſe who have attained a good meaſure of knowledge in the Latin tongue, & that tranſlation is only uſed by Schollars in their ſtudies; whereas the tranſlation out of which this Engliſh is gathered, is publikely read in Churches, and in all families. And as Junius his tranſlation had the advantage of all former from whom it borrowed light, ſo this for the ſame reaſon hath the advantage of Junius his tranſlation, and is undoubtedly the moſt correct tranſlation extant. The Tranſlators were many, and very eminent in their faculty; the time they ſpent in it was much, and their care and diligence extraordinary. To ſpeak nothing of the living, whoſe vertues may be in the [b] eye of envie, and therefore their commendation ſubject to the tongue of detraction: I can upon my owne knowledge teſtifie of the deceaſed Phenix of our Univerſity and Colledge, Doctor Rainolds his induſtry, who followed that pious work with that intention of ſpirit & vigilance, that he therby much impaired his ſtrength, and neer the end of it ended his dayes; and in the tranſlation of the Book of life, was himſelf tranſlated to a better life: To which, he who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life, bring all thoſe who love the way of truth in ſincerity.

TO THE READER CONCERNING the Benefit of this CONCORDANCE.

Christian Reader,

Blindnesse of mind is not the least part of misery that sin hath brought upon man; which is so much the greater, by reason of the more than Cymmerian darknesse which hath possessed the world: so as a man, not inlightned, living all his dayes in the world, must needs some time or other, fall into utter darknesse. Only Gods word is a light to our feet, Psal. 119. 105. and it hath such a divine efficacy accompanying it, as it enlightneth the eies, Psal. 19. 8. Worthy it is therefore so to be read and studied, as readily on all occasions the directions and consolations thereof may easily be applied: which if it were done, such helps as now are necessary, would be less needfull. Our carelesnesse is the cause of the necessity of such helps, as by the Divine indulgency are affoorded us. Instance Intemperancy, the cause of so many skilfull Physicians: and Injustice, the cause of so many learned Judges and Counsellors. On this ground Plato accounted those places miserable, where were many Judges and Physicians, because he supposed that there must needs be much Injustice and Intemperancie. Herein he censured, not the means of redresse, but the cause of the need of those means. Thus may we lament the causes of the great need that there is of so many Teachers, many Commentaries, many common-place-books, and many Concordances. Were we as perfect in the holy Scriptures as we should, and might be by study and prayer, many helps that are now of singular use, would be but as staves to steddy and strong men. But the case being as it is, and is like to be so long as the world lasteth, very commendable and profitable is the pains that is taken (to omit other helps) in composing Concordances of the Bible. Large Concordances have heretofore bin made in the three languages of learning, Hebrew on the Old Testament, Greek on the New, & Latin on both. Because Latin is now the most common language throughout Christendom, many, as well Papists as Protestants (as Hugo Cardinalis, Alberstadius, Franc. Luca, Pellicanus, Bullocus, and others) have laboured in this soile. But among others, the Stephens, Robert and Henry, have gone beyond all in skill and paines; insomuch as their Concordances, especially the last of Henry Stephen, justly bear this Title, Maximæ & absolutissimæ Concordantiæ, The largest and perfectest Concordances. Robert Stephen the father most diligently searched out all the words of holy Scripture in the common Latin translation, and set them down in an alphabeticall order, more fully than ever before: Henry Stephen the son hath accurately distinguished words of divers significations, & so composed them under their distinct heads. A great help, at least to young Students in Divinity. Such hath the profit of Concordances bin found to be, as they have bin composed in sundry other languages. There have bin many yeers since English Indexes of proper Hebrew & Greek names, with their significations, and Tables of the principall points contained in the Bible, and some so large, as they carry the title of Concordances; (amongst which, the brief Concordance lately collected by M. John Downham, Batchelor in Divinity, & allowed by authority to be bound with the Bible in all Volumes, may well deserve the precedency:) yet have they come short of the use of perfect Concordances, which is to point out, not principall points only, but every particular point in holy Scripture. By a perfect Concordance, if thou remembrest but one word of a sentence which thou desirest to know, thou maist be directed to find out the whole sentence, & the place where it is; that so, not by the bare words, but by the dependance of them, thou maist find out the true sense. By a perfect Concordance thou maist know what words and phrases are rarely, what frequently used, yea, how oft any word is used; a point wherein the Jewes were very skilfull. By a perfect Concordance thou maist soon find out proofs for every principle of Christian Religion, & so have thy faith the more firmly settled thereon. By a perfect Concordance thou maist soon discern what points the holy Ghost most urgeth and inculcateth: and thereupon what are most diligently to be observed, and most carefully to be heeded by thee. By a perfect Concordance some supply may be made of mens too much negligence in reading the Scripture, and of their ignorance following thereon. Many other commodities of good Concordances might be added to these, wherin they much excell all Indexes, Tables, Common-places, Epitomes, Abbreviaries, & such other meaner helps for finding out the golden mines of the Scripture. Hereby judg what a treasure our English Church hath wanted a long while, and what at length it hath gained by the indefatigable industry of the Composer of this Concordance; wherein all the words and phrases of the Bible are so fully and distinctly set down, as in regard of our English tongue, it well deserveth the fore-mentioned style of Henry Stephens last latin Concordance. This Concordance is composed according to the last & best Translation of the English Bible, which is now most in use; & in that respect also this Concordance must needs be of better use than any that ever was before it. For the more ready finding out of that wch is sought in this Concordance, words are distinguished, not only by their severall parts of speech, (as love, lover, loving, lovely,) but also in their numbers, (as love, loves,) & in their severall terminations, (as love, loved, lovedst, loveſt, loveth,) yea, and such words as consist of the very same letters, but are of different significations, are oft distinguished: as beare, applied to a woman with child, and bear in relation to a burden, & beare signifying a wild beast. These distinctions will save searchers into these mines much pains, and make the treasure sought for much more readily found. In this last edition many words & phrases, overslipped in the former, are supplied. And because the Apocrypha useth to be bound up with the Canonical Scriptures, the Concordance thereof is added in this edition. If any shall object and say, that there can be no great need of an English Concordance, because Concordances are for Divines, and they have help enough from the forementioned Concordances in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin; I answer, that all of all sorts, Divines & others, may make very good use of a Concordance in their mother tongue. For first, I doubt whether all that carry the name, and are in the place of Divines (O the misery of this learned age, wherein there is such abundance of able Divines!) can well use Concordances in the learned languages. To such, a Concordance in English may be usefull: as for others, I suppose that such Divines as are well exercised in the originall Tongues, may notwithstanding be best acquainted with their mother tongue, & that the phrases thereof are most familiar to them. As for the latin, there are many Translations therein, which much differ in words and phrases, so as in searching Latin Concordances, they may oft misse what they seek. But this English Concordance, being taken out of the last Translation, which is now most, if not altogether in use, they may soon find herein what they seek; in which respect the best learned may make good use, even of this English Concordance. As for Lay-men, even such as are ignorant of the learned languages, their faith is, or ought to be grounded on the holy Scriptures, & rules for their life fetched from thence. When they therefore remember a word or phrase of a comfortable Promise, or of an usefull direction, or of a needfull history, or when they hear such points briefly quoted by Preachers or others, & would gladly know where to find it, that they may again and again read it, & further meditate thereon, a Concordance in the mother tongue (and none but such an one) is of excellent use to them. Thus this Concordance being usefull to all, let it be used by all: and God give a blessing to the right use thereof.

word

Thine W. Gouge.

Capernaum seeking Jesus
42.is not this Jesus the son of 61.when Jesus knew in himselfe
64.Jes. knew from the beginning
67.then said Jesus to the twelve 7.1.Jesus walked in Galilee: for he 28.then cried Jes. in the Temple
37.Jesus stood, and cryed, saying
39.Jesus was not yet glorified
8.1.Jesus went into the Mount of 6.but Jesus stouped downe, and 9.and Jesus was left alone, and 10.when Jesus had lift up himself
20.these words spake Jesus in the 25.Je. said to them, even the same
9.1.as Jesus passed by, he saw a man
11.a man that is called Jes. made
35.Jesus heard that they had cast
37.Jesus said unto him, thou hast
39.Jesus said, for judgement am I
10.6.this Parable spake Jesus
23.Jesus walked in the Temple
11.4.when Jesus heard that
5.Jesus loved Martha, and her
13.howbeit, Jes. spake of his dea.
14.Jesus said unto them plainly
17.when Jesus came, he found
20.heard that Jesus was cõming
21.then said Martha to Jesus, Lo.
23.Jesus saith to her, thy brother
25.Jesus said unto her, I am the 30.now Jesus was not yet come
32.Mary was come where Jesus
33.when Jesus—saw her weeping
35.Jesus wept
38.Jesus therfore again groaning
39.Jes. said, Take ye away the st.
40.Jesus saith unto her, Said I not 41.Jesus lift up his eyes, and said
44.Jesus saith to them, loose him
45.seen the things which Jes. did 46.told them what things Jes. had 51.he prophesied that Jesus
54.Jesus therfore walked no more 56.then sought they for Jesus
12.1.then Jesus six dayes before the 3.and annointed the feet of Jesus
7.then said Jesus, Let her alone
11.away, and beleeved on Jesus
12.heard that Jesus was comming
14.and Jesus, when he had found
16.but when Jesus was glorified
21.Sir, we would see Jesus
22.Andrew and Philip told Jesus
36.these things spake Jesus
44.Jesus cryed, and said, he that 13.1.when Jes. knew that his houre
